Project Overview

New York City Community School District 14, in consortium with New York City Community School District 32, is converting five traditional schools into whole-school magnet programs. These magnet programs engage students in authentic, real-world theme-based experiences; give educators access to high-quality professional learning; increase opportunities for all students; and expand school choice in the districts. These Magnet Schools Assistance Program (MSAP)-funded schools use project-based learning approaches, community partnerships, and parent engagement strategies to improve student achievement and positively affect students and their families. In addition, the MSAP schools are creating diverse learning environments by attracting students from different racial/ethnic and socioeconomic backgrounds to foster meaningful interaction among students – a strategy designed to boost student achievement, self-esteem, and interpersonal relationships.
